New Chapter Begins For Kansas City Hockey With The 2017-18 Season

A new chapter of Mavericks hockey begins with the 2017-18 season, one with a new name, new division and new NHL affiliation. Formerly the Missouri Mavericks, Kansas City's professional hockey team officially became the Kansas City Mavericks on June 1. While the official name of the team changed, the location will not – all home games remain at the Silverstein Eye Centers Arena in Independence.

In mid-July, the ECHL announced the new divisions for the 2017-18 season. Kansas City was placed with Cincinnati, Fort Wayne, Indy, Kalamazoo, Quad City and Toledo in the new Central Division of the Western Conference. The Mavericks will face divisional opponents 32 times in the upcoming season with 17 of those contests coming at home.

The new season also brought a new NHL affiliation, ending a two-year tenure as the ECHL partner of the New York Islanders. The Mavericks made the switch to team with the Calgary Flames and their AHL affiliate, the Stockton Heat. The new partnership was announced on July 8 and promises to be a mutually beneficial agreement between the clubs.

The Mavericks open the 2017-18 campaign on the road at Tulsa on Friday, Oct. 13 at 7:05 p.m. and will begin their home schedule on Saturday, Oct. 28 against Wichita, also at 7:05 p.m. Season tickets remain on sale for the upcoming season. For all the latest on the Mavericks, follow the team on Twitter (@KC_Mavericks), Instagram (kcmavericks), Facebook (Kansas City Mavericks) and Snapchat (KCMavericks), download the team's free mobile app (Mavericks), and keep checking in to KCMavericks.com.
